“examine yourself”

By: Jerry Fite

Paul had endured the false accusations said about him. Some questioned his integrity, and authority as an apostle, despite the fact that he had proven it, and would do so again (2 Corinthians 12:12, 13:10). Amidst the onslaughts, Paul turns the examination to a very personal exercise. He writes, “Try your own selves, whether ye are in the faith; prove your own selves. Or know ye not as to your own selves, that Jesus Christ is in you? Unless indeed ye be reprobate” (2 Corinthians 13:5).

It is easy to say that Christ is in us, and we are in the faith, but it is more difficult and more helpful to ourselves to prove it by examining the facts. But who or what is to determine the standard for this self-test?

The Corinthians had been applying the standard: “measure yourselves by yourselves” (2 Corinthians 10:12). No wonder that they commended themselves, because they were their own standard. Paul did not have this in mind when he exhorted the brethren, “try yourselves”, for he says such are “without understanding”. Yet many today are going through life relying on this foolish standard. Paul reminds us, “for not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth (2 Corinthians 10:18).

The standard by which we examine ourselves is the gospel of Christ. If we are to determine objectively that we are “in the faith” we will have to measure up to message of the gospel of Christ that produces faith (Romans 10:17). If we are to determine objectively that Christ is in us, we will have to comply with the proclamation of the mystery of the gospel which is “Christ in you, the hope of glory” (Philippians 1:27, Ephesians 3:6).

To properly examine ourselves to see if we are in the faith, we must do so with candor. We will avoid our “think-so’s” and measure ourselves by God’s “says-so’s”. Neither will we short circuit the important self examination process by cutting down others, so we can be exalted. I will look at myself and apply the standard of God’s word to my actual conduct. It has been rightly observed, “illusion often becomes delusion”. If we are not honest with our actual conduct, or what God truly says - the facts, then our illusions will only produce our delusions. We will be cheating ourselves, and jeopardizing our relationship with the Lord.

When we honestly examine ourselves by God’s standard, we will often find ourselves not passing the test, and in need of change. We must then change, in accordance to God’s standard. We must not be like the person who looks into the mirror and forgets about his actual appearance, but be the person who “looketh into the perfect law, the law of liberty, and so continueth, being not a hearer that forgetteth but a doer that worketh, this man shall be blessed in his doing” (James 1:25).

We should not neglect to examine ourselves because we are afraid of the actual results. The time is now for self examination, so we can make needed changes in our lives. If we learn we have failed the test, we can make changes for the better. At the judgment, the same standard will be applied (John 12:48), but then it will be too late for change. Honestly examine yourself today by the standard of God’s word, making sure you are in the faith, and Christ is in you.
