HAVE YOU LOST THE SENSE OF RESTORATION?

By: Jerry Fite

Don't we admire the spirit of those who restore old houses to their original architectural design? They are diligent in researching the materials used, considering particulars, like shape and color of paint, and then expend the energy to restore the house to its original glory.

Our English word “restore” comes from the Latin word “restaurare” - re- again and staurare—to make strong. One who restores things desires to strengthen again that which has broken down.

In the early nineteenth century, our country witnessed a spiritual rebuilding which was known as the Restoration Movement. Such men as James O’Kelly, Walter Scott, Thomas and Alexander Campbell, and Barton W. Stone saw the need to go back to the Bible, instead of man’s creeds, and restore New Testament Christianity. This first investigative step led them to see that denominational beliefs and practices had no Scriptural basis. They studied God’s Word to return men to the ancient order revealed by God.

There are some today who fear that we have now lost this “sense of restorationism” One recently defined this loss by saying that we “just assume that we have every thing figured out , and all our doctrines here are right, and now it is a matter of preserving the conclusions that our spiritual ancestors have already determined.” He thinks this describes many of us in the church today.

What can you do to help eliminate this brother’s fears? If you continue to appeal only to the Scriptures for your guide, and study and restudy the doctrines you believe, making sure they are authorized by, and are not contrary to the teachings of God’s word, then you will continue to manifest the spirit of restoration regarding God’s order of things.

However, this constant examination of beliefs must not cause us to think that we cannot know God’s absolute truth. Walter Scott came to the conviction that baptism was for the remission of sins. I am convicted of the same truth; not because Walter Scott believed it, but because Acts 2:38 declares it. Surely, I have not lost the sense of restoration if after thorough study I, like Walter Scott, believe baptism is for the remission of sins, and diligently hold this fact as absolute truth.

Jesus said, ...If ye abide in my word, then are ye truly my disciples; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free (John 8:31-32). The key to knowing the truth, is abiding in God’s word. Some today are directing our attention to theories of man outside of God’s word. Appealing to man’s wisdom, some are suggesting that the days of creation were not literal days, the serpent in the garden was not literal, and the flood was not universal. Surely we have not lost the sense of restoration if we notice that these teachings do not have any Scriptural basis, and are willing to expose them as man’s wisdom.

Keep examining your beliefs, while abiding in God’s word. Preserve the absolute truth you find, even though others may have found it before you. Then, you will maintain the true sense of restoration, establishing God’s true ways in your time on earth.
